ODE PEACE. T O

CEASE that strepent trumpet's found!-Let fofter notes abound-See Peace descends—see war and anguish fly! Let joy preside, and forrow cease to righ! By the loves and graces led, the loves and graces led, Scatt'ring roles on her head, Sweet Peace her olive waves! She looks around on either hand, Where the blood-stain'd banners stand; And drops a tear upon the graves— Of those who bravely bled!

To fing these laurel'd heroes in the tomb,
Their unstrung lyres the peace-fond nine resume.
But the above the reit,
With siner feelings blest;
Who with her strains melodiously flow,
Can teach e'en Gots the luxury of woe— Sweeps her tender murm'ring wires, While her wrapt foul in sympathetic glox Melts with forrow's gentle fires!

Lovelieft fifter of the nine-Sweetest music sure is thine!
Friend to sadness—charming pow'r—
That skeetens melanchois's hour! Go to the tombs where lovers vigils keep!
Go to the cot—where childless widows weep!
Divide the tears of them who mourn, And ease the weight that muß be borne ..

See nobleit scenes arise Dilate the breath and sparkle in the eyes! While with the prospect all the soul distends— See Empire from her skies With Freedom-o'er our country bends! And Fame, her vergant laurel in her hand-Leaps from her throne, and hails the rifing land!

See Commerce on her late enfanguin'd facre, Where long the letter'd lay; Where late in vain, She gave her forrows to the wind, And wept the chein, Which all her fails confin'd! See to the breeze her loofen'd ftreamers play— On this auspicious day— While Peace and Freedom ope their various store And bid her bark the wat'ry world explore.

But to the dead some tribute lines belong-To fame the sweetest tribute is of fong! With love of country, love of deathless fame,
Unites in kinding glow's facred flame.

'Twas this that made the partiol bosoms swell—
When the loud trumpet's found,

Its martial fummons gave; And bade the fifter colonies around, Give to the field their brave. This sparkles in the hero's eye-'Tis this that teaches him to die— This glow'd in Warren's bosom when he fell.

But what new wirtue, with all others join'd, Infpir'd bis godlike mind;
Who when the day of peril rofe,
Hurl'd dire destruction on our foes. Who when the clouds of death hung thick and fad-Retriev'd the day—and cheer'd each drooping head! Too frail's the laurel which the rine could give, While earth exists great WASHINGTON will live!

When war's fell flaughters ceafe, What forced transpart eviry bosom feels!

E'en paint fear—
Suspends her weary flight:
Feeling revokes her starting tear—
Or drops it with delight! See INDEPERDENCY, in her train, Leading Liberty and PEACE! While at the vision even Reason reels, And drops her too prudential rein. And drops her too prudential rein.

Then to guide—the task be thine,
Frolic joys and sportive wine—
Cease, fair Delia, cease to sigh—
For thy plighted soldier 's nigh!
In the splendid pomp of war,
See his proud victorious car—
While Fame, surrounded by the smiling loves,
Hovers o'er him as he moves.

Glory's splendour now unites. Glory's splendour now unites. To ennoble your delights;
Hymen's torch with purer blaze—
Burns—when warm'd with Glory's rays.
ace and Love united banners wave— For Love's bleft rites in Peace fould crown the brave, Eaftern Store, Maryland, March 30, 1783.

"Dearly beloved brethren,"
JOYFUL days at length have come! Sound the trumpet, fife and drum; Let the bagpipes squeak it brike And the banjer strike up friskly !-See! Us Tories, all converted, Since by George, our friend, deserted! O what fools we all have been, Else the change, we had foreseen Long before the present date; But our pride involv'a our fate; Yet we find, we're not too late. Such who to New-York have fled,

Are better there alive, than dead;

But such of us who staid behind, May yet a better fortune find. All turned Whigs! we'll get in place, And act with such peculiar grace, That in dee time we shall be courted, And our meatures all supported. Then our friends shall sate return, And no more in exile mourn .-Our bonny STEWARTS and ALEXANDERS Shall be dubb'd the chief commanders, Under our auspicious reign, And a plundering war maintain Against the Spaniards, for their dollars, Mill'd pittoles, and golden collars.—
O how grand! in dead of night
Wives and children 'tis to tright, While the houses wrapp'd in flame Our great lenity proclaim !-See! Ingratitude begins To announce the peoples fins; British goods and British ware

Is all they dream of—all their care! Give 'em there, and as for France, Let her stay at home and dace.
My joy's so great, I'm quite o'ercome,

And for a while may keep me dumb; But first, I must make krown my glory Being now a Whig, the once A TORY. April 10, 1783.
